The plays, "Little by Little", "Dark Afternoon", and "Outrageously Outrageous", are sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, national honorary dramatics fraternity. ORIENTAL ART EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY

Featuring war masks and monotypes, a new art exhibit goes on display in the Activities Room today and will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily through July 23.

The entire display is by Wilder Bentley, visiting art and literature instructor, who is considered an expert in Oriental art.

Bentley teaches "Art of the Orient" and "Literature of China" in the present summer session.

Bentley has done considerable work featuring Oriental techniques as well as many works dealing with social themes.

He is nationally known for "fine printing, and he and his wife once ran a private press in Berkeley. He has done guidance work, taught social problems, and was once connected with the University of California Press. At present he is a member of the regular faculty of Stockton Junior College.

Bentley, according to Hugh C. Baker, director of summer session, became interested in Oriental materials as a boy because members of his family had spent many years in China.

His lecture material is made clear and concrete to his students, and in keeping with that policy, he took his art class to U.C. Tuesday to see an exhibit and demonstration of modern Oriental techniques by the internationally known Japanese art instructor at U.C., Chiura Obata. Bentley spent Saturday working with Obata in preparation -3-for the demonstration.
